For the Final DNP Project, students will appraise current literature on an existing population-specific practice issue. Students will then design, implement, and evaluate an evidence-based project for its value in improving patient and healthcare outcomes. Projects may include, but are not limited to, activities such as benchmarking data, developing business plans, translating research into practice, analyzing policies, developing and/or evaluating new patient programs or new models of care, and evaluating implementation of technology.

Please identify a practice issue that interests you at this time and provide a general explanation of what your potential project might entail.
