

Common Questions

Does Phi Psi Haze?

Phi Kappa Psi opposes hazing in any form and the National Fraternity swiftly acts on any and all reports of it.

Phi Kappa Psi supports a New Member Education period that introduces new members to the fraternity, teaches them basic study and leadership skills necessary to collegiate success, educates the members in the dangers of alcohol and drug abuse, and provides safe activities for new and older members to bond with each other.

Will my son's experience be like that of movies like "Animal House" and "Beta House"?

Unfortunately movies like these have given fraternity members a bad rap as irresponsible, reckless and foolish. In reality, men of fraternities like Phi Kappa Psi are part of values based organizations who commit themselves to their growth as individuals through academic achievement, leadership experiences, diversified networks and community involvement.

Phi Psis believe there is no better compliment to a college education than philanthropic participation in our communities.

I don't want my son's grades to hurt; will the time he invests in the fraternity hinder his achievement?

Phi Kappa Psi places great value on the academic success of our members, in fact it is one of our top priorities, after all academics is the reason our members are in college in the first place.

The time invested into the fraternity is up to the individual. No member is ever asked to place the fraternity above his own personal priorities like work, school or relationships. However, the time your son puts into the fraternity will ultimately reflect what he gets out of the experience. By participating in the life of his chapter, your son will learn to balance his time, a priceless skill after college.

Ease Your Worries

Though you may have been exposed to negative stereotypes of fraternities, joining a Greek organization is one of the best decisions your son can make during his college years. Over 150 years ago, our founders laid the basic principles and values of an organization that complimented our college education by giving back to our communities; the best way to put an education to use

The phrase “helicopter parent” is overdramatic, but parents are clearly more involved in the decisions their sons make today than in the past. Our goal is to help you understand Phi Kappa Psi and all of its benefits, while letting you know about our risk management policies and the expectations we hold for every member of the Fraternity.
